THE RISE OF FAR RIGHT INFLUENCE

LANCE A. MENDOZA +

A political ideology in which individuals hold heavy authoritarian, non-secular, or nationalist beliefs regard to governance. Ultimately being against having equal political representation and characteristically democratic components (CSIS, 2025).

THE EXPLANATION

THE DATA

- France's right wing National Rally party now holds 123 seats in the National Assesmbly in 2026 compared to only 2 back in 2016 (Wike, 2026).
- The far right German party of "Alternative for Germany" didn't have any parliamentary seats in 2016, only to obtain 150 seats in 2026 (Wike, 2026).
- In the United States, the amount of far right groups has grown from 1020 in 2018 to 1263 in 2025.

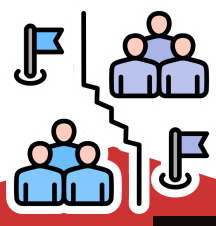

THE WHY

The causes of such far right influence includes but is not limited to:

- Widespread far right media and news proproganda
- Occurance of worldwide events that instill fear in specific groups of people (such as bombings)
- Lack of demonstration from authorities that they're able to take care of safety threats
- Support or incitement from authorial and political figures
